WHAT A LANDSLIDE!
WALL STREET DISLIKES IT
HOMES, FARMS, TAX FREE

By Arthur Brisbane
(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

BRITISH conservatives have won by a landslide that surprises and frightens them.

One man is not surprised, namely Lord Beaverbrook who was born in Canada and learned to look at British affairs calmly from a distance. Ten days ago he telegraphed this writer from London: "The Nationalists will have 400 seats in the house."

Ramsay MacDonald is re-elected by a diminished majority. It is therefore not necessary to "kick him upstairs into the house of lords" making him a peer to let him continue as head of the government.

Lady Astor of America and Lloyd George's daughter, two intelligent young women, are re-elected.

One of the political cartoons, most frequently used in the campaign, showed the British workmen out of jobs, on a dock, where ships were landing boxes labelled "Germany," "Japan," "United States," etc.

The idea was to make workmen understand that free trade means free competition in labor.

With this election, Britain becomes a protectionist country, an important step and a great change.

WALL STREET woke up to find Britain "gone protectionist," and brokers didn't like it. They said, "that will close British markets to United States exports, and business won't be so good."

London's stock exchange was much pleased and prices went up, from the opening. But a stock exchange which means largely the "floor trader," often looks no farther ahead than 3 o'clock the same afternoon.

Wall Street and the rest of the world may learn that better times for England must mean better times for every country.

The British Socialist-Labor party that threw overboard Ramsay MacDonald, who had led their party to power, disowning him merely because he put patriotism ahead of party, got exactly what it deserved.

For the time being it ceases to exist as an element of any importance and lies flat on its back, defeated, with MacDonald at the head of the united government.

MR. McCAMPBELL of Holmdel, N. J., candidate for the state legislature, has an idea that should elect him and many others, adopting his idea.

He would exempt from taxation up to five thousand valuation, any home in which a man lives, and exempt farms up to $10,000.

He suggests that a man raising a family should be put on a basis of "tax equality" with a vast amount of untaxed invisible wealth and millions of untaxed visible property held by government institutions, schools, churches, preachers, fraternal orders, etc.

That's a sound suggestion. If the Lord should see a man raising his family in a little house, struggling to pay the tax bills, and the fine Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, costing several millions, free of taxes, who doubts that He would say, "turn that around, free the little man from taxes, Christians able to build a $5,000,000 church for me are able to pay taxes on it."

MANSLAUGHTER CASE EXPECTED TO END FRIDAY

Mrs. Sophia Huckenstein Testifies As Hearing Nears End

POLICE CAPTAIN CONLEY ON STAND

Asserts East Liverpool Woman Admits "I Did It," After Arrest

BULLETIN
LISBON, Oct. 29.—The defense rested its case at 1:55 p. m. today following which closing arguments were started by Assistant Prosecutor George Lafferty who will be followed by J. C. Laughlin, Butler, Pa. and S. W. Crawford, counsel for the defense.

One hour is allowed each side for arguments. The jury will be charged by Judge Jones at 9 a. m. Friday.

LISBON, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Sophia Huckenstein, 41, of East Liverpool, on trial on a manslaughter charge for the fatal stabbing of her husband John Huckenstein, took the stand in her own behalf this morning for direct examination by her counsel, S. W. Crawford.

Mrs. Huckenstein charged cruelty by her husband, alleging that he struck and beat her continually and that, on the day of the stabbing, he had kicked her and called her names. She was scheduled to undergo cross examination by prosecuting Atty. J. E. Bauknecht this afternoon.

The state rested its case against the woman at the opening of the hearing at 9 a. m. today. The jury is expected to get the case late Friday afternoon.

With Common Pleas Judge W. Frank Jones presiding, the case entered the third day this morning. Hopes were being entertained that the hearing will be completed late Friday or early Saturday.

Police Captain Testifies
Testimony that Mrs. Huckenstein admitted the stabbing with the calm statement, "I did it," after her arrest on Thursday night, September 24, was offered by Police Captain Mason Conley. A statement in which the defendant related details of the quarrel leading up to the stabbing was introduced by prosecuting Attorney John E. Bauknecht.

The statement, received as evidence over objections filed by S. W. Crawford, defense counsel, said that the stabbing followed a quarrel that had been continued for several days between Mr. and Mrs. Huckenstein. The defendant, in the statement,

ARREST MADE IN EXTORTION CASE

Prominent Dentist Held By Police; Denies Court's Charge

(By Associated Press)
ASHLAND, Oct. 29.—Persistent denial that he attempted to extort $1,000 from T. W. Miller, chairman of the board of the faultless rubber company, was all that police were able to obtain from Dr. I. R. Suter, prominent Ashland and Mansfield dentist, after hours of questioning.

As police planned to question him throughout the day, they announced Dr. Suter probably would be given a preliminary hearing in police court tomorrow.

It was planned to bring handwriting experts here from Columbus to determine if the handwriting on his own letters corresponds with that on letters written to Mrs. Miller.

The letters Mrs. Miller gave to police bearing the signature of "Dr. I. R. Suter," demanded that he be given the $1,000 or he would kidnap her son Parker, 8.

Considerably disturbed by the letters, Mrs. Miller left her home with her son. She was in Cleveland today planning a trip to Florida for a rest.

Lad Hurt In Crash Is Critical Today

Vitulene is suffering from a crushed skull and other injuries. His three friends, Gustave Pappas, 12, Fred Clunk, 15, and Lewis Evans are reported improving.

The youths were injured when a truck in which they were passengers left the Kensington-Lisbon rd., turned over and crashed into a tree Sunday.

CANADIAN RUM FOE RAPS PLAN TO REPEAL LAW

Ben H. Spence, Toronto, Is Speaker At Union Meeting Here

Canada's liquor laws were explained and discussed by Ben H. Spence, of Toronto, Canada, journalist and prohibition worker, at a union service of Salem churches Wednesday evening at the Baptist church, which was marked by a large attendance.

Crime on Increase
Crime of all kinds and accidents are on the increase in Canada, as a result of its traffic in liquor, according to Spence. He gave statistics he had compiled, covering a period from 1923 to 1930, as proof of his statements.

That government control of liquor stops, where the least possible harm begins, with its sale to the dealer, was pointed out by Spence. He stated that while Canada does not have the open saloon, like that in this country before the 18th amendment was passed, that what it does have is "beer parlors, practically the same thing, only under a nice name, with the same demoralizing effect."

Law, However, Is Swift
The law in Canada, however, is much swifter in its action with offenders than it is in the United States. Spence told his audience, as he related instances to show in just a few hours law breakers were tried and sentenced.

Spence is of the opinion that a "loose liquor law" in the United States would not help to check its crime wave. "Lord help you if you get a loose liquor law," he stated.

He appealed to Americans to hold the ground gained against the liquor traffic and to carry on in this cause, and thus encourage other nations, who are in the same struggle.

Special music for this service was furnished by the Baptist orchestra and the Harmony Boys Brass quartet, composed of William Holloway, Dale Leipper, Marion McArtor and Clair King.

PRE-HALLOWEEN WARNING ISSUED

Police Start Campaign to Curb Illegal Activities of Merry-makers

A police campaign which promised prosecution in every case was ordered today by authorities to curb activities of pre-Halloween merry-makers accused of damaging property and other acts of semi-vandalism.

The service department has several street repair jobs under way in various sections of the city.

During the night it is necessary to hang red lanterns on the jobs as warnings to motorists and pedestrians.

A number of these lanterns have been stolen, city officials said today. Six vehicles last night. As a result, motorists and pedestrians are subjected to danger because of the lack of warning lights, and the city, in the case of injury to some one, would be, perhaps, liable for damages.

Parents are asked to cooperate in an effort to keep the youngsters' activities within legal bounds.

Motive Is Mystery In Murder of Man

(By Associated Press)
NILES, O., Oct. 29.—Officers today were at a loss for a motive in the probable fatal shooting of Harry Caswell near Mineral Ridge last night.

Mrs. Pearl Bowman, 30-year-old widow, is held in jail in connection with the shooting. Caswell was picked up from the street where he had run screaming for help, shot through the lung. Mrs. Bowman suffered a minor scalp wound which officers said apparently was self-inflicted in attempted suicide.

Faces Third Trial

CANTON, O., Oct. 29.—Albert L. Thayer, New Castle, Pa., architect, will be tried a third time on charges of bribery. Prosecutor James M. Augst announced after the jury in the second trial failed to agree and was dismissed yesterday.

Thayer accused of having solicited a $7,500 bribe from a contractor, was convicted at his first trial but won a reversal.

COAL INDUSTRY LEADERS MEET WITH GOVERNOR

White Calls Conference For Stabilization Of Ohio Production

UNION OFFICIALS SUMMONED FIRST

Four - State Conference Planned At Lexington In Future

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—Convening a conference of international and state mine union officials here today in an attempt to stabilize the bituminous coal industry of Ohio, Governor White told union representatives he hoped a solution would be worked out that would be acceptable finally to the border states of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Conference Tomorrow
If a plan is finally agreed to between the mine union officials and Ohio operators, whom he has called for a conference tomorrow, it will be submitted to the proposed conference of the four states at Lexington, Ky., later, the governor said.

In convening the conference, in the sun room of the executive mansion, the governor reviewed the situation of the coal industry of the state since expiration of the Jacksonville wage scale April 1, 1927.

Competition among operators to find a market for their product, the chief executive said, has resulted in the bankruptcy of many coal operators and apparently has settled down to the jungle law of survival of the fittest.

Points to Other Interests
"The theory has been advanced that this process of elimination, the law of survival of the fittest, might well be permitted to hold sway and eventually the most efficient and best financed groups would survive; but there are other interests which intervene, the humanitarian interest in the behalf of the half million employees and their two and a half million dependents," Governor White told the miners. "These should not be permitted to become helpless victims of this jungle law," he added.

Grid Tilt Follows
Another feature attraction of the night's celebration, one that is expected to prove a magnet for probably 5,000 persons, will be the Columbian county championship football game between Salem High school's strong team and a formidable Wellsville High eleven at Reilly athletic stadium. The game will be played after the parade.

Between halves of the football game a tug-of-war will be held between members of the freshmen and sophomore classes of Salem High. The high school band will play and march in special formation on the gridiron.

Following the football game a masquerade ball will be held at Rainbow Gardens with dancing from 9:30 to 12:30. Lewis Patt's orchestra, composed of Salem musicians, will play.

Hit-Skip Motorist Arrested In Canton
CANTON, Oct. 29.—Simon Paul Mack, 30, was held for Coroner T. C. McQuate in connection with the death of Patrick Kaley, 65, run down in the street here last night by a hit-skip driver.

Mack, whom police charge was the driver of the car, was caught after a chase through the city by J. B. Young, state highway inspector, who witnessed the accident.

Kaley died shortly after he was received at the hospital.

Witnesses Hit Book's Author

Nan Britton Attacked In Testimony Given In Toledo Suit

(By Associated Press)
TOLEDO, O., Oct. 29.—The list of character witnesses in the $50,000 libel suit brought by Nan Britton against C. A. Klunk, Marion hotel operator, grew larger today.

Another group of Marion residents who knew the author of "The President's Daughter," in her school days took the stand and testified against her reputation. They were called in defense efforts to prove that her reputation was not defamed, as she claims, by Klunk's part in the sale of the book "The Answer to the President's Daughter."

The witnesses included Mrs. Mildred Christian, Roberts, sister of George B. Christian, Jr., secretary to the late President Warren G. Harding; and Mrs. Helen Grigsby, Ellen L. Stahl and Mary Catherine Hague, who went to the school with Nan Britton, under the tutelage of Daisy Harding, sister of the president.

Evidence also was introduced tending to show that Nan Britton was named correspondent in divorce proceedings instituted by Mrs. Patricia Whitman against Richard M. Whitman of New York. Mrs. Whitman charged that her husband was the actual author of "The President's Daughter."

Sight Restored to Bellaire Girl, Nine, Blind Since Birth

(By Associated Press)
Bellaire, O., Oct. 29.—Blind since birth by a double cataract over her eyes, Edna Goddard, 9, has recovered her sight by a surgical operation.

Civic clubs obtained the services of Dr. Leo Covert who removed the cataracts. She was amazed, she said, at the difference in seeing objects as compared with the feel of them.

As a result of the restoration of her sight the girl must learn the identity of many objects that surround her daily and also must learn to read by sight. During her years of blindness she had learned to read raised letters.

One of her first trips was to a moving picture show. She marveled at the strange sights that were revealed on the silver screen, and many of the objects were foreign to her.

Edna laughs and chuckles in her happiness and true to her sex the greatest wonder of her new sight is a small hand mirror in which her own reflection is a never ending joy to her.

"I'm so funny," she says.

Sales, Employment Gaining on Coast

Rays of Sunshine Seen Through Rifts In Business Clouds

25 PER CENT JUMP IN WHEAT LISTED

Raisins Higher; Payrolls Grow and Shop Clerks Are Loafing Less

By RALPH HEPPE
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—Glints of sunshine, breaking through rifts in the business clouds of the Pacific coast, are spreading financial warmth to the farmer, the manufacturer, the storekeeper and the laborer.

The hen's cackle may be no louder, but it is more tuneful to the farmer's ear. The golden cream in the milk pail and the golden grain in the bin no longer are reduced to fool's dust. Eggs, butter, grain and dairy products, along with other products of the soil in the west, are putting a few more coins in the agriculturists' jeans.

Wheat 25 Per Cent Higher
A weighty factor in the Pacific northwest is wheat, the price of which has turned up abruptly. "More than 25 per cent higher than prices obtainable earlier in the season," is the way R. J. Stephens, Spokane, manager of the Farmers National Grain corporation, put it.

With an upturn in prices of 40 per cent since January, butters have indeed taken on an aureate hue. The hen that lays the golden egg hasn't been hatched as yet, but golden specks in the way of higher prices have been noted. These products affect the pocketbook of the average farmer all over the coast.

Raisins in the San Joaquin valley of California, where vineyards have been pulled in an effort to combat over-production, have been selling at steadily rising prices for months. Toward the close of the shipping season, the price of juice grapes turned upward.

Employment Gains Seen
In manufacturing lines, commercial survey agencies note gains in employment and activity in shops turning out wearing apparel, lingerie, especially millinery and shoes for midday.

Records of the California state division of labor statistics show a gain of 12.3 per cent in payrolls of textile companies from August to September. Other lines, in which state statisticians found gains in employment or wages, or both, are:

Township Ballots Figure For First Time In School Tilt

A three-cornered fight for the mayoralty and contests between Republicans and Democrats for nine other offices served as high spots in Salem's political situation today as the city's electors turned their attention to the municipal election next Tuesday.

Out of 13 offices subject to election, ten will be contested. Electors in the city and those of Perry township will cast ballots for the selection of 13 officials out of

Webster Is Only Name On Ballots For Auditor Job

The name of K. L. Webster, regular Republican nominee for city auditor, will appear on the ballots for the Nov. 3 election.

In fact, his is the only name that will appear or that legally can appear.

Election officials so advised The News upon its investigation at the instance of several voters. Their queries were prompted by the distribution of sample ballots which bear the printed name of another, with Webster's name crossed out.

No other candidate than Webster was nominated for this office at the party primaries in August and therefore no other name will appear on the ballots, officials declared. They said the sample ballots misrepresented but, being sample ballots, could not be construed as a violation of the election laws.

Columbiana Man Succumbs Suddenly

COLUMBIANA, Oct. 29.—The body of Clyde Sponseller, 52, who dropped dead while visiting his brother, Emery, at Elizabeth, N. J., Wednesday morning, has been brought to his home here for burial.

For several years Mr. Sponseller had been subject to heart attacks, one of which proved fatal. He was born near Columbiana, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sponseller, and spent most of his life in and near here.

Two years ago he returned from California, where he had spent several years, and three weeks ago went to visit his brother in New Jersey.

Surviving are one sister, Mrs. John Orr of Columbiana, and four brothers: Emery of Elizabeth, N. J.; Harry, Ralph and Leo of Columbiana.

How to Say It

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 29.—Father O'Donnell, head of the great Notre Dame University, did me the honor of a visit out to the "lean to" here yesterday and, by the way, he says constant usage makes a thing correct and that "Notre Dame" is O. K. and the ones that try to say "Notrey Dom" is all wet.

He says Anderson is doing a great job of coaching in Rockne's place.

No business or school is bigger than the head of it and you just have to meet this fellow and chat with him to see why that school prospered.

See what happened in England, no matter what government or party is in, if you have your election during the hard times they will throw 'em out on their ears. The Republicans have just got from now all next summer to make things look better or out in the alley they go. Yours,

BEATING COMPETITION

Inroads made by motor truck competition on railroad revenues are fundamentally important in considering the railroad's problems. The interstate commerce commission, which has just finished the railroad's request for a 15 per cent rate increase, and the railroads, themselves, agree that unless truck competition, subsidized by government-built roads and encouraged by cheap tires and gasoline, is met, no rate increase in the world can do any good.

The railroads are not twirling their thumbs and waiting for an act of providence to help them, fortunately. They are out after more business. Their efforts are being watched and applauded by a nation which realizes that a large part of its investment stability depends on sound conditions in railroad credit.

One plan sponsored by the Pennsylvania railroad and already adopted by three other eastern roads, contemplates transportation by truck bodies by rail at rates below trucking costs. Truck bodies are loaded by the shipper and transported to the freight depot by motor, where they are lifted by crane onto railroad cars and shipped to their destinations. When they arrive, they are moved to distribution points again by motor. Thus, the railroads plan to compete with truck operators by doing their hauling for them more cheaply than they can afford to do it themselves.

Evidence that the railroads are working on their problems intelligently is abundant. This recent plan is a fair example of the aggressiveness which they are displaying.

GREAT BRITAIN RALLIES

Elections, whether they be for the purpose of changing or reaffirming the position of the existing government, are social rallies. People form opinions, which they express by votes. They feel their power and exercise it on the trend of social movements.

The British election on Tuesday was a rally of extraordinary importance. National policies were at stake. A coalition government, which had requested a "doctor's mandate" to see the government through a dangerous crisis, was waiting an answer. Free trade was threatened.

The coalition government, headed by Prime Minister MacDonald, was returned to power with an overwhelming majority, which was expected to be the outcome of the election. The "doctor's mandate" was given, as requested. The conservative party, which is the backbone of the coalition government, won a clear majority. Great Britain will turn to tariff for its industrial life.

The labor party, deserted by Prime Minister MacDonald when he was offered the leadership of the coalition cabinet, was crushingly defeated. Through Mr. MacDonald's efforts it had been elevated to the position of minority ruler of British. Now, deprived of its former leader, it is out of the government with the exception of the few parliamentary seats it was able to hold. The man in the street, apparently, has lost his faith in the party which had been seeking a mandate to legislate state socialism into being. The labor party will have to rebuild its power.

The roughest stretch of Britain's political road lies just ahead. The people have rallied to the support of the coalition government presumably because they believe it has the power to accomplish certain promised reforms that will restore British workmen in their former positions of stability. If things work out, Ramsay MacDonald and his cabinet will go as far towards redeeming their election pledges as possible and then resign, leaving the conservative party to do the rest. Mr. MacDonald will be given a post of honor, perhaps as viceroy of India, and the termination of the career of one of England's greatest men will take place simultaneously with the termination of a turbulent period in English political history.

What Others Say

PERFUME

When a magazine published in New York came out in scented covers the other day there was a lot of laughter and many sly jests about the appropriateness of the idea. Particularly was the opinion of the regular press that perfume on certain tabloids was one of the crying needs of the hour. Anyway, the episode stirred the enthusiasm of the editor of "Aromatics," a magazine devoted to the interests of the beauty culturists of the country, and a survey of the uses of perfumes by the ancients resulted. The editor writes that the idea was borrowed bodily from the ancients. Not only did the Egyptians and the French of the Restoration period perfume their books, but the bookmakers used special odors for such variety of tomes; attar of roses or musk for the Satures of Ovid, Suetonius and the Gay Latinists in general and lily, hyacinth for the plastic authors, and so on. The custom served the double purpose of invoking the mood of the reader, and disguising the odors of the glue, leather and other material.

The new vogue of the moment, the wearing of scented beads and necklaces, dates from the Middle Ages, says "Aromatics." Perfume makers then benefited by the custom of both men and women of wearing elaborate cassioles filled with aromatics and spices to guard the wearer against disease and evil spirits.

Delving into the past, the magazine further informs us that: Kiss proof, or indelible lipsticks, were used by the Romans 1300 years B. C.

Cleopatra used many tints of lacquer for both finger and toe nails. A 2,000-year-old compact containing eight different shades of rouge was recently discovered in France.

And there you have it. Perfumes have an honorable ancestry. They are in no way "modern." Indeed, they rank alongside the cave man and the rest of the characters in antiquity. So why worry? "What can't be cured must be endured," writes the poet, to which we remark "OK."—New Haven Register.

Loses 20 Pounds of FAT in 3 Weeks

Formerly stout people the country over are certainly thrilled with joy since they discovered a quick and easy way to get rid of ugly fat. It is called Bonkora, the new Battle Creek reducing treatment. The safe and natural way to take off excess pounds by cleaning the intestines and removing retained moisture from fatty tissues. Mrs. Margaret Mraz, Gary, Indiana, jubilantly reports losing 20 pounds of fat in three weeks—since taking the Bonkora treatment. If you really want to lose fat, try a little Bonkora in half a glass of water for the next week. See how quickly your unwanted pounds vanish by the "easy stage" as it is called. The big secret is selecting the foods you like in their proper combination—they do not turn to fat. Free fat furnished shows you how to choose the correct combination. Know the joy of health and a slim, attractive, youthful figure.

NEW YORK Day by Day

by O.O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—While the comedy and drama seem to have gone into a tailspin in the legitimate theatre this season, the musical revue has spurred into a new and amazing favor. Doubts were expressed for these honeyed extravaganzas due to the flop of talkie versions. Yet—

The three most heavily patronized shows so far have been the Scandals, Vanities and the Follies. While they have been packed to capacity, the other forms of legitimate theatre amusements meet only a desultory reception. The inference is the public is in the mood for only light diversions.

Ziegfeld, Carroll and White have gone to lavish lengths to dazzle their customers. Each is said to have spent more than a quarter million in his displays. And not in the history of the Rialto have there been such conspicuously triumphant first nights.

Even the depression put no damper on the sky prices New Yorkers will pay for the sort of show they want to see. Speculators had no trouble whatever in disposing of choice seats for the premieres at $100 each, and in one instance $300 for a pair down front on the aisle.

Handling traffic as such openings is an increasingly difficult police problem. At one it was necessary for mounted police to form their horses into a lane from entrance to curb so audience could safely depart.

Aside from the "celebrity curious" are the insistent swarms of auto-graph hunters who surround notable persons for signatures. A movie star was so roughly handled upon one occasion she had to return to her car and home to change costume.

The new 14-story, five million dollar home of the New York Curb Exchange is a striking contrast for those who remember the monkeyish antics of curb brokers in old days. The new home is at Trinity Place and Greenwich street where-as the old was literally the curbs of Broad street. In old days the brokers squatted in office windows and ambidextrously signalled in finger language buying and selling orders to representatives in the streets. It offered a milling spectacle of high tensioned excitement to the stranger.

My earliest recollections of the Broad street curb was the noon day sermon of "The Bishop of Wall Street," a bearded, silver-haired preacher who mounted a soap box among the money changers to remind them there were spiritual values greater than those of Mammon. Oddly, he always attracted large and respectful audiences.

While the stately Empire building receives oodles of free puffs in various New York theatres, it is also famed for much—and it seems to me cruel—kidding. Empiness is the theme, yet those who know say that when the pick-up begins it will fill magically as innumerable other buildings have that got off to a bad start.

A wheeze about the Empire by Willie Howard concerns a despondent gentleman who leaped from the top spine a week ago. "Where did he land?" he was asked. Howard replied: "Nowhere, yet."

Then there was George Jessel's bright thrust at Jesse Lasky, who in disressing in a banquet speech suddenly inquired: "Let me see, where am I?" Shieked Jessel: "In the Hotel Astor. And your name is Lasky!"

Bread cast on Broadway waters: Six years ago she told him, "You have a wife and I no longer want the label 'Kept.' Loan me enough to start a business of my own." He did. She prospered and paid him in full. The other day she

The Stars Say

For Friday, Oct. 30

An interesting chain of planetary configurations, both by lunar and mutual aspect, fortifies the augury of a gratifying success in many channels of activity and enterprise, business as well as personal. There may be an unexpected opening, quite worthwhile, but demanding change of environment or business affiliations. The prospects are good for labor, industry, real estate and possessions with a definite tendency to stability of fortune and gratified ambitions.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of renewed and sudden opportunity for changing irksome employment and environment, branching into a field which may enhance the fortunes, increase the possessions and fulfill ambitions. A child born on this day should be talented, efficient and industrious and should attain its ambitions by its diligence, skill and initiative.

FRUIT JUICE FOR BABY

In this series I am attempting to give the young mother advice about how to feed her baby. I hope your particular baby may have the benefits of breast feeding. There can be no doubt that child is blessed indeed if it is fed from its mother's breast.

Milk is the most precious of human foods. At the same time it can become a virulent poison, unless it is pure to begin with, and properly kept, it will soon deteriorate into a harmful mess. This is a good thing for adults to remember, and certainly the mother of a newborn babe should never forget it.

In the cities it is possible to get what is known as "certified milk" or "pasteurized milk." In the country, good milk from a nearby farm can be procured. But I don't care how pure the milk is in the beginning, unless it is properly kept, it will spoil to a degree that makes it improper food for an infant, or even for a sensitive adult.

There is much discussion about whether or not pasteurization lessens the food value of milk. Personally, I do not believe it does. The only question involved is whether or not the vitamins are damaged in the process of pasteurization, as they are perhaps when the milk is boiled.

The particular vitamin which may be damaged by heat is Vitamin C. This is the element which has to do with growth. It helps to build good teeth. It does away with the danger of scurvy.

In this connection when I speak about "scurvy," I do not mean the old-fashioned scurvy they used to have in poor houses, prisons, and aboard ship. That was a dreadful scourge. The scurvy I am speaking about is much less marked, but nevertheless it is a condition we wish to avoid.

Many children are listless, lackadaisical, lacking in energy, apparently lazy. Many a child of school age has been punished because of his lack of attention. As a matter of fact, the poor youngster may be the victim of what we may call "hidden scurvy." He cannot apply himself to his studies because his poor, undernourished brain won't work. In all probability there is a serious lack of Vitamin C in his diet. If good milk, or raw fruit is given him, his unpleasant symptoms will disappear.

Of course, I do not mean to intimate that a baby can be given raw fruit, but even an infant can be given fruit juice, like orange juice or the juice of tomatoes. The older child can be given raw cabbage, turnips, carrots, tomatoes and the various citrus fruits.

If there is any question about the pasteurization of the milk harming its food value, it is because this important Vitamin C has been damaged. As I said, personally, I do not believe that pasteurization has this effect, but if there is the slightest doubt about it, he giving of the orange juice or tomato juice will supply all the baby needs of Vitamin C.

The value of pasteurization is so great that I am confident city mothers will make a mistake not to use pasteurized milk. By the addition of the fruit or vegetable juice the deficiency, if there actually is any, will be overcome.

metal trades, furniture factories, leather and rubber good makers, publishing, paper products, clothing, millinery, laundering and a miscellaneous group.

Trade reviews have consistently placed the total of the coast steel business ahead of last year. Sales for major jobs were reported by the magazine steel to be 322,000 tons, compared with 251,000 in the like period of the previous year, a gain of 28 per cent. Big pipeline jobs, to bring water, gas or oil to cities or industrial centers, and municipal and state projects played a large part in the advance.

Canton Resident Is Shot Five Times; Mystery Confronts Police

(By Associated Press)

CANTON, Oct. 29.—Mystery surrounding the shooting of Sam McDovon, 52, who was wounded five times early this morning, occupied police here.

The shooting is said to have taken place at the rear of the home of Mrs. Sarah Sharen, 51. She told police she fired two shots when she heard a noise at the chicken coop at the rear of her home. A revolver taken from her contained two empty cartridges and police are unable to account for the three other bullet wounds received by Moldovan.

The wounded man identified Lo Ellis, 41, a roomer at Mrs. Sharen's home, as his assailant. Ellis maintained to police that he was awakened from his sleep by two shots and that he dressed immediately and phoned for police. Mrs. Sharen, Ellis and Abraham Joseph, 39, another roomer, are being held by police.

Little hope is held for Moldovan's recovery.

said she stabbed her husband after he called her objectionable names.

Evidence revealed that Mrs. Huckenstein had been married twice.

Describes Stabbing

Police Captain Conley described the stabbing as he said it had been explained to him by the defendant on the night of her arrest. He testified that he had been called to the Huckenstein home by neighbors who complained of numerous quarrels between husband and wife.

Asking Mrs. Huckenstein what the trouble was, Conley said she replied, "there's the trouble lying there," pointing at her husband on the floor of the home.

Others called to testify Wednesday were Jad Adkins, 11, Charles Kidder, Ezra Adkins, neighbors of the Huckensteins; Dr. C. H. Bailey, who attended the man at the East Liverpool City hospital; and Police Chief Hugh McDermott.

Adkins and his son told of hearing a violent quarrel between husband and wife previous to the stabbing. The son said that he saw Huckenstein stagger to the door of the home and that the defendant pulled him back into the house and shut the door.

McDermott was called to identify clothing worn by the victim.

Domestic Truce, Hindenburg Plea

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—For the third time since he became head of the Republic President Von Hindenburg departed today to address an earnest, almost fatherly, appeal to the new economic advisory council at the opening of its first session.

His plea for a domestic truce and a common effort to overcome Germany's disastrous economic situation was compared by some of those who heard him to his famous war gulf speech on his 80th birthday in 1927 and to his speech in March last year explaining why he signed the Young plan laws.

Break Sharply In Opening Trading

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The stock market sagged further in the early transactions today with the American tobacco issues breaking rather sharply, in response to announcement of only the regular dividends.

American tobacco common and Class B. Shares lost 4 points, and issues off a point or so included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, American Can, Case, and Allied Chemical. Only the regular dividends of $1.25 a share were ordered on the tobacco shares, and there was no announcement on the extra payments expected in some quarters.

Wall street was keenly interested in Thomas W. Lamont's remarks on debt revision and the tariff in a "Saturday Review" article. Because Mr. Lamont had conferred with Premier Laval shortly before the latter sailed, considerable significance was attached to the banker's suggestion that Germany should address her moratorium views direct to France and that Europe's "prime business" now was to undertake settlement of the reparations question "without American initiative."

Sterling exchange slumped sharply, opening at $3.86, off 4 1-4 cents.

THEATER Attractions

"SUSAN LENOX, HER RISE AND FALL" and "THE HONOR OF THE FAMILY" complete their three day runs at the local theaters today.

The former, at the State theater, stars Greta Garbo and Clark Gable. Both these capable screen characters do splendid work. The story has a peculiar fascination that is almost undecipherable. The fine direction keeps the picture going at a rapid tempo, reaching a most gripping climax.

Bebe Daniels is the star of the Grand's feature. Warren William, reminding one of John Barrymore and speaking not unlike him, is cast as Miss Daniel's leading man. The story is a sprightly comedy, telling the story of a proud temptress and the way in which she finally meets her defeat.

COMING ATTRACTIONS show "Sob Sister" at the State and a western thriller as the Grand's feature.

James Dunn, the over night sensation of "Bad Girl" is the star of "Sob Sister." He gives another fine performance as a reporter. "Sob Sister" also marks the screen debut of another young star, one who was chosen by Fox as one of their 1931 star debutantes, Miss Linda Watkins.

The picture derives its title from the appellation tagged on to those feminine members of the press who write up the heart-throb angles of murder cases and while it deals with the experiences of one of these thrill writers it is not in its true sense a newspaper story.

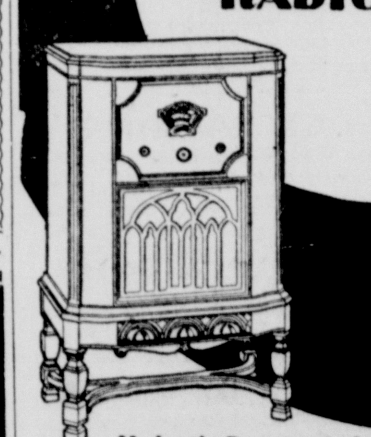

Rather than depicting the hustle and bustle of the editorial and press rooms it tells the more interesting and human story of the girl's own romance with a rival reporter, a romance which is cast under a shadow and almost on the rocks by business rivalry and antagonism.

"THE RANGE FEUD," new Buck Jones' attraction which will be shown Friday, is more than just another western. It has the production value of a dramatic feature—a strong plot with dramatic situations well handled by an exceptionally good cast, an appealing love story, beautiful photography and of course thrills... thrills.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

FOOTBALL ISN'T PAYING
LOSE MONEY LAST WEEK
COACHES MATCH WITS
YOUNGEST IN BIG TEN

SALEM HIGH school officials are looking towards the remaining four games on the Quaker football schedule, those with Wellsville, Youngstown South, Lisbon and Alliance, in hopes of aiding a rapidly decreasing Athletic association treasury which this year is not showing the surplus of other years. Football, formerly the big paying sport, isn't bringing in the dollars as in past seasons.

In five games, three varsity and two reserve, Salem High has taken in a total of $1,393.90 in total receipts while expenses, not including cost of lights and minor incidentals, have amounted to $611.25. This, on paper, leaves a balance of $782.65, but, the season was opened with the association facing several debts that will probably balance the expenses and receipts to almost an even point.

In a financial report of the five games, the following expenses and receipts were listed:

Canton McKinley here: receipts $803.75; expenses $191.45.

Niles game: receipts $426.25, expenses $174.

Irondale (reserves): receipts $20, expenses $40.

Girard (reserves): receipts, none; expenses $16.

Kenmore: receipts $143.90, expenses $189.80.

FOOTBALL is used as a medium for the support of several minor sports at Salem High and for this reason a successful season, from the standpoint of finances at least, is necessary. Cross country, in which there are absolutely no receipts, is one of the important minor sports supported by the grid game. Basketball, last year a losing proposition also depends on football for financial support.

The cage game finished the 1930-31 season slightly in "the red." Cross country added $92.45 to the association's expenditures and will add an equal amount to the indebtedness this year. And too, the track and field season last year was far from a financial success, continuously incurring weather preventing the association from finishing ahead.

Those wondering what expense is connected with a football game, from a glance at Faculty Manager Harold Williams' reports, will find that there's an average cost of $7.25 for advertising, $57.50 for officials, $9 for a football, $75 as guarantee to visiting teams, $30 for police and other, more minor expenditures.

Football camp expenses this year were approximately $400. Add to this the cost of equipment for the 40 players and it will be discovered that the sport is carrying quite a load.

SAM S. WILLAMAN and E. C. Hayes, two of the youngest coaches in the Big Ten will match wits at Bloomington, Ind., next Saturday when Ohio State plays Indiana in the Hoosiers' homecoming game.

Coach Willaman is in the midst of his third season at Ohio State, while Coach Hayes is in his first season at the Hoosier school.

Hayes has coached the varsity track team and assisted in football coaching at Indiana for several years, but this is his first bow as a full-fledged Western Conference grid mentor.

An exceptionally large crowd is expected to witness the sixteenth meeting between these two schools, inasmuch as Indiana turned Chicago back last week, and as this is the Homecoming game.

According to present plans, the Athletic Association of the Buckeye school will sponsor a special train leaving Columbus at 8 o'clock next Saturday morning, and the Columbus Chamber of Commerce has announced that it also will have a special to Bloomington for Ohio fans Grant Ward, Ohio State university sport announcer, will broadcast a play-by-play account of the game through radio stations WEAQ of Columbus and WTAM of Cleveland.

The renowned Ohio state band will not make the trip to Bloomington, having taken the one trip allowed by Western Conference rules to the Michigan game on Oct. 17.

A scoreless tie in 1929 is the best showing that the Hoosiers have been able to make against the Buckeyes since 1924. To date, the Scarlet and Gray teams have won 8 games, lost 5 and tied 2.

Old Conference Rivals Meet Again to Decide Championship

VETERANS TO PLAY WITH PEDEN SQUAD

Alliance Stadium Scene Of Night Game; Case Meets Wooster

BY JAMES L. RENICK

Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Oct. 29.—Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio university football teams reached the peak of their training schedule today and tomorrow will start tapering off for their eventual game Saturday at Athens, the result of which probably will decide the Buckeye Athletic association for another year.

Ohio Is Favorite

Ohio will enter the game a decided favorite due to its impressive record compiled over the last two years when it has ruled supreme over Buckeye gridiron circles.

Coach Don Peden has another veteran team back this season and has lost only one game, Indiana defeating the Bobcats, 7 to 6, in the first game of the year.

However, there isn't an Ohio Wesleyan supporter ready to concede the Athens eleven and edge. They point to Edgar Westfall, half-back, runner, kicker and passer, and say "stop him, if you can."

Wesleyan Confident

And that's just about how the game stacks up. If Ohio can perfect a defense against the all-around ability of Westfall then it looks like another championship for the Cats, although Coach George Gauthier has a wealth of available backfield material at his disposal.

Down at Athens the coaches are guarding against overconfidence, although the 13 to 7 score tossed into the Bobcat camp last Saturday by Cincinnati makes this task much easier.

Mount Union opposes John Carroll of Cleveland at Alliance Friday night.

Another game that will not count in any conference standing but important, nevertheless of great importance will be the meeting of Muskingum and Cincinnati Saturday. Muskingum is one of the undefeated and untied eleven in the state and is out to maintain this mark.

Case Battles Wooster

Up at Cleveland Case and Wooster will continue a rivalry started in 1903 when they met on Van Horn field. Case is undefeated but tied once in the Ohio conference while Wooster has two victories and one defeat this year.

Wittenberg, another undefeated eleven, will journey to Tiffin for its first daylight game of the season and will be attempting to avenge a 1930 defeat from the hands of Heidelberg.

Cleveland Named Manager of Relays

COLUMBUS, Oct. 29.—Morton Weiss, Cleveland Heights, has been selected as student manager for the 1932 Ohio Relays which will be held at Ohio State University, May 6 and 7 next year. Weiss will handle all relay work which will get under way very shortly.

Several changes are expected to be announced in the customary program for this big track event due to the fact that next year will be an Olympic year.

Start Grid Practice

On the bulletin boards was the official announcement: "Army begins intensive practice for the football game Saturday with Colorado college."

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brinsley Sheridan, father and mother of the Army end who died of a broken neck suffered in gridiron battle with Yale, together with another son, Gerard, and a daughter, Mrs. J. L. Herman, were enroute to their home in Augusta, Ga.

The corps rallied yesterday to give their comrade a military burial that for dignity, impressiveness and depth of feeling has never been surpassed in West Point history. In full dress, shouldering their rifles, they guarded him in honor as he lay through the day in the tiny Catholic chapel, overlooking the Hudson.

Booth Attends Service

Catholic comrades went to a last requiem mass with him there in the morning and in the afternoon, his classmates, the football squad, relatives, officers and Yale mourners, Capt. Albie Booth and head coach, Mal Stevens, attended the solemn burial services in the entire corps, military band at the chapel.

Then in the late afternoon the head beating out the measured tread of a funeral march, led a majestic way for him to the cemetery.

Behind the flag-draped casket, resting on an artillery caisson, drawn by seven horses, plodded a cavalry horse draped in black, Sheridan's boots set backward in the stirrups. Ahead walked the priest in his cassock and robes, behind trudged the mourners, the officers who had been his teachers. As dusk was falling, he was lowered into his grave as the priest prayed again, his company fired three volleys and the post bugler sounded "taps."

The corps turned then and marched back in the gathering darkness down the long hill to the barracks while the band swung into the blithe marching tune. Sheridan was behind them, and the Army has to move forward.

Goslin's Brother in School

WENONAH, N. J.—James G. Goslin of Salem, N. J., brother of Lou (Goose) Goslin, St. Louis American League outfielder, has enrolled in the cadet battalion at Wenonah Military Academy. He is interested in all sports and has ambitions of following in his brothers footsteps.

It is not given to most coaches of athletics first to teach a famous father and then take the latter's promising son under his wing. Lawson Robertson, track coach of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, and track member of U. S. Olympic teams, is shown instructing 17-year-old Arthur L. Kiviat for a long-distance run. Arthur is the son of Abel Kiviat, one of the greatest middle-distance runners of two decades ago. When Abel reported for track, it was Robertson who launched him on his career.

Willaman Fears Passing Attack of Hoosiers In Saturday Tilt

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Oct. 29.—Protection against Indiana's forward passing attack is the goal sought by the Ohio State University's football coaching staff, this week as the Buckeyes prepare for their meeting with the Hoosiers at Bloomington, Saturday.

The Buckeye mentors believe they can stop anything the Hoosiers attempt in the way of plunging game, but are not so certain if Indiana takes the air.

There is a possibility that Coach Willaman will use two complete backfields against Indiana, one composed of Cramer, Hinchman, Holcomb and Vuchinich and the other made up of Oliphant, Keefe, Carroll and Welever. In these two combinations Willaman has power in the first and plenty of speed in the second.

BASEBALL BIDS FAREWELL TO C. A. COMISKEY

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Baseball's leaders came to Chicago today to bid a final farewell to Charles Albert Comiskey, owner of the White Sox.

Funeral plans called for extreme simplicity, but it was expected to be one of the largest in Chicago's history. Not only were notable of the sport to attend, but huge numbers of friends of the "Old Roman" gathered to pay their respects.

Active pallbearers were Patrick Nash, Urban Faber, John P. Hardin, Ed. Fleming, Judge Henry Horner, Joseph T. Barry, Jesse Mattoon and William J. Leahy. Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, John A. Heydler, president of the National league, and William Harridge, president of the American league, who Comiskey helped organize, headed the list of baseball powers and presidents of other major league clubs were to attend the services.

Castle Krepps knocked off a 203 for the Potters, Johnnie Zines of the midgets had a good chance for high score honors, getting games of 195 and 153 but fell to 93 in the finale.

Salem high cross country team to compete in district meet at Cleveland on Saturday

Salem High school's cross country team Saturday will seek championship honors of Northeastern Ohio, competing in the first annual district meet at Cleveland.

State Meet Next Week

The Quakers, coached by R. B. Clarke, are conceded a good chance to cop sectional laurels, several veterans of the 1930 state championship squad being back with the team. The Ohio state meet will be held at Columbus on Saturday, November 7.

The Clarkemen have won, by decisive margins, five consecutive meets, to-date this season, defeating Wooster, Youngstown Rayen, Cleveland Lincoln and Cleveland West Tech and appear superior to other district racing aggregations.

The personnel of the squad that will represent the Quakers at Cleveland has not yet been selected by Clarke. Harold Hartsman and Frank Theriault are certain to be elected as one of seven starters, both having performed consistently well all season.

Hartsman Injured

Hartsman was unable to compete in this week's dual meet against Rayen High because of leg injuries and was replaced by Erwin Beck who easily won first place in 10 min. 8 sec. Beck's presence in the Red and Black lineup is doubted because of his possible participation in the Salem-Wellsville grid game Friday night.

Other probable starters include

R. B. Clarke

Stanley Kamasky, Keith Harris, Bruce Shasteen, Paul Wiggers, Murray Cooper and Dan Holloway. The team this year is without services of Wilford Brantingham, holder of the state record which he set last year, and Harold Walker, Ohio champion miler.

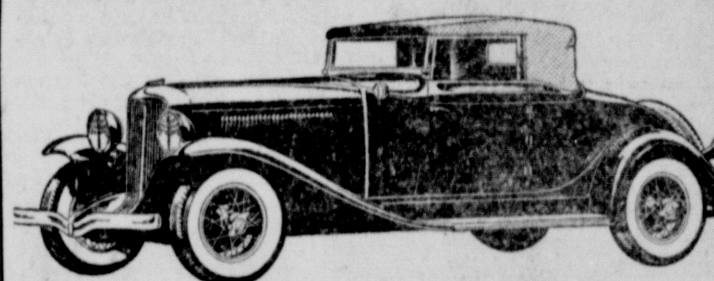

will bet its chance to go against the Lions this Saturday. At any rate Jock piloted the reserves through yesterday's practice while Andy Gustafson was behind the first team.

There is only a small chance that the varsity will be kept out of action as long as it was against Western Reserve, but Sutherland, with his eye on the final three games of the schedule and to next year when he will be minus his entire varsity line, is going to give the second team all the work it can stand.

Relays Conform to Olympics

COLUMBUS, O.—The customary program of the Ohio Relays, annual track classic of Ohio State University, will be changed next spring to correspond with events of the 1932 Olympic games. May 6 and 7 are the dates selected for the Ohio Relays.

Daughters of Statesmen Form Sharp Contrast

Jose Laval, Fun-Loving Daughter of French Premier, Is Unlike Ishbel MacDonald, Except in Their Common Political Interest.

PREMIER LAVAL and DAUGHTER JOSETTE

PREMIER MACDONALD and DAUGHTER ISHBEL

NEW YORK—Pretty, vivacious, Jose Laval, 19-year-old daughter of Premier Pierre Laval of France, waved gaily as she stepped ashore from the flag-bedecked tugboat Macon, clamping her armful of red roses tighter in the excitement of her landing in New York.

And good reason she had to be thrilled. For on the first visit to the United States she takes her place as another of those loyal young things who find their greatest happiness in furthering the career of an illustrious father. She puts her thumb in the political pie with no desire to pull out a plum for herself.

This alliance Française of the sticky Auvergnat and his only child, puts us in mind of another famous interfamily political partnership—that of Prime Minister of Great Britain Ramsay MacDonald, and his daughter Ishbel. At 20 years of age Ishbel was summoned from school to assume the duties of official hostess at 10 Downing st. A terrifying task, but one with which she was well fitted to cope.

It was just two years ago that the British Premier and his daughter came to this country on a mission of amity much like the one that brings Premier Laval and his daughter today. Very fitting it was that as the city's welcoming boat Macon passed Governors Island a field piece boomed out a 19 gun salute—for that salute was to cope.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

Converting the Cellar

"If we lived in a 30-room house instead of a three-room apartment, I'm sure Jack and I would be just as crowded," sighed Genevieve who has kept house only a few months. But what with the joint treasures of their bachelor days, plus the wedding gifts of many kind friends and relations, and of course the indispensable pieces they purchased themselves from time to time, they have accumulated more than their little home holds comfortably.

Accumulating Things

Anyway, some people have a talent for accumulating things. They can't resist buying an attractive object and they never throw anything away. And they can put up a good defense for the habit, too.

"Why I'm attached to everything that's part of our home. I could no more part with that dear, battered old desk than with an old friend." Or they point out, quite reasonably, that the beauty for which certain objects were purchased is still beautiful—why cast it aside?

The Old-Fashioned Attic

In the old days things that were no longer useful, but too good to be thrown away were stored in the attic. There they remained in dust and hope. And, sure enough, old fashions did revive from time to time, and what was a worn-out what-not in grandma's day was dug out, many years later, to receive a place of honor in the living room, an antique whose every wormhole was tenderly cherished.

Today's there's a more utilitarian point of view. Instead of cold-storing the objects no longer in their first youth, they are adapted in some other way to immediate needs. The conversion of the cellar has offered a large range of possibilities to the amateur home decorator. Cellars can be merely furnace-holders in this day of limited space. For they are no longer dusty caverns. No matter what fuel is used, the furnace can be confined to a small section and the rest of the ample cellar space dressed up for real use.

How to Use the Cellar

For one thing, the cellar makes an excellent game room, and is sometimes the means of encouraging exercise among adults who don't usually like to bother. All the games requiring plenty of room for big tables, like billiards, ping-pong, etc., will make the converted cellar an attractive spot. Even some of the outdoor games can be adapted—like miniature golf, croquet or the innumerable ball games that are constantly devised by ingenious manufacturers. A good, noisy game, requiring a bit of muscular skill, is a surprising relaxation to many a tired business man who won't bother to

Cellar Furniture

Converted cellars can be attractive in proportion to the diversions provided. Or they can be made quite elegant. Flagstone floors, covered with hooked rugs, or linoleum in flagstone design, beamed ceilings, stuccoed walls, have changed many a gloomy cellar into an inviting though informal living room. One handsome games room in a fine old house is furnished with natural maple chairs and tables, bits of old fashioned patchwork as decoration, and the narrow high windows have been transformed into beautiful leaded casements, hung with gay chintz. Instead of cold storing these things that are still as good looking as when new, how about adapting them to the furnishing of the rehabilitated cellar games rooms?

Abolish Floor Cracks

Cracks and crevices—little useless accidents that they are—will contribute much to increase cleaning drudgery. Those fine cuts, just big enough to catch and hold dirt, but not sufficiently large to admit a stiff brush—resist earnest efforts toward spotlessness. And the only way to check their evil work is to abolish them altogether.

Sinks and Drain-Boards

Anyone who has spent plenty of time examining a hospital room recalls the absence of cracks and crevices which are taken for granted in the home. That fine line between baseboard and floor doesn't exist in a sanitary hospital room. The composition floor, continues up on the wall for a foot, more or less, and instead of a sharp line there's an incurve. No possibility for dust-catching there. And the smooth rounded surface is much easier to brush than the sharp angles of an ordinary room. Wooden floors cannot be treated this way, but composition flooring and well-laid linoleum can be rounded so as to avoid that dusty crevice.

Similarly with sinks and drainboards. Little cracks and crevices are unnecessary if the principle of the rounded edge is carried out. The new sinks, of monel or other composition metals have the drainboards, edges, connections so rounded that there are no cracks or seams that collect dust or retain moisture.

In selecting decorated furniture the housekeeper does well to bear cleaning as well as beauty in mind. Is there too much of the carving for spotlessness? Superfluous rolls and ridges may add nothing especially aesthetic to the object, yet provide a source of labor to the wielder of the duster. If labor-saving is a consideration then ornamentation can well be abandoned for simplicity and easy care.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeanette Young Norton

"Pep" It With Chutney

Chutney, as purchased, is in the delicacy class because it is an imported relish. Made abroad it consists of many East Indian fruits and spices—limes, mangoes, chilies and the hot native condiments. Although it is expensive it goes a long way, for only a small quantity can be used at a time. And chutney added to the simple, rather flat foods improves them immensely. However, it is quite possible to produce here a homemade chutney that is extremely good.

Chutney

- 2 dozen large ripe tomatoes.
- 1/2 dozen onions.
- 1/2 dozen large, tart apples.
- 3 red peppers.
- 3 green peppers.
- 6 chili peppers.
- 1 lb seedless raisins.
- 1 large bunch celery, chopped fine.
- 2 quarts of vinegar.
- 3 cups brown sugar.
- 4 tablespoons salt.

Mix together the chopped, peeled apples and vegetables and place with other ingredients in a large saucepan. Cook until thick and quite clear. Then bottle in small jars and seal.

One or two spoonfuls of chutney may be added either to French dressing or mayonnaise, and served either with salad or as a peppery garnish to an entree of cold fish, deviled eggs, or cooked cold vegetables.

Curry is another Oriental condiment—a powder prepared of many powerful spices like tumeric, hot chilies, etc., blended together. A spoonful more or less of curry powder added to plain sauces will help make palatable otherwise flat dishes. Rice or spaghetti or potatoes in curry-flavored white sauce, the root vegetables like turnips, parsnips, carrots; and the cabbage family—white cabbage, kohlrabi, Brussels sprouts—are improved if given a dash of curry treatment.

How to Get Relief From Catarrh

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness, or head noises, go to Lease Drug Co., and Broadway Lease Drug Store or your druggist and get 1 oz of Parment (Double Strength); take this home, add to it 1/4 pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises, clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucous stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to make, tastes pleasant and costs little. Every one who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial. You will probably find it is just what you need. Adv

Making history on a spot which already has contributed more than its share to the history of America, Jim Ray landed his autogiro in the grounds of historic Monticello, the old home of Thomas Jefferson, near Charlottesville, Va. The purpose of the visit was to deliver to the "Freedom of the Press" committee a signed endorsement from President Hoover of the dedication of a room in the old mansion. It was Jefferson who put a clause in the Constitution guaranteeing the freedom of the press.

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets and loves a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith". Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is aboard. Evelyn is enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests the doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that she is safe.

CHAPTER VII

He left her in the capable hands of the kindly farmer's wife and returned some hours later to make sure she had suffered no great ill from exposure. The airplane company had wired, he told her, and the relatives of McKinnon, the pilot of the steward and mechanic as well as the Eames relations would be on to claim the bodies. "You were right about Miss Smith," he said. "No one has any record of her. Her passage was booked through an agent who does not know the name of the person booking it."

Tony had left the city then, thought Fanchon. It would be some time before he learned of the accident. It would, of course, be in the papers. But here might be where papers were not to be had. In the morning she left for New York. She left with Dr. Warren more than enough money to take care of . . . "Miss Smith." "Not," said the doctor sadly, "that it will be needed. It is impossible that she live through the day," he said.

He took Fanchon's address . . . in care of Mrs. Carstairs. And on her arrival at the depot to await the train, which would be flagged for her, she was given a wire by the station agent.

"Immeasurably happy and grateful for your escape. Will meet you Pennsylvania station. All my love. Aunt Jennie."

By now they all knew Evelyn was a niece of Mrs. Carstairs—THE Mrs. Carstairs

There was no going back.

In the drawing room which she had engaged, Fanchon, in a borrowed coat and hat, sat staring out of the windows, listening to the beat of the wheels along the shining tracks . . . impostor, they said to her, impostor, impostor.

But she argued that, in a sense, she was doing no real harm. Jennie Carstairs had never known Evelyn Howard. She could, therefore, never have loved her. The girl was literally nothing to her, save some one of her blood to whom she owed a belated duty. If Fanchon took her place, Fanchon would, she vowed, live up to it; she would give back value received, for affection and peace she would render affection and duty in return. And when time had passed and there was no longer any danger, she would go quietly away and never bother anyone again. It was not on the cards that Evelyn would live.

She thought of Evelyn dying, with no one of her own about her,

and her heart constricted with an agony of shame and terror and self loathing. But she had spoken; or rather she had kept silent. It was too late . . . too late.

Evelyn would die without recovering consciousness. Jennie Carstairs would be spared much unhappiness and self reproach; and she, Fanchon, would find, for a little time, at least, a measure of safety and peace.

She opened Evelyn's big, flat, roomy handbag, stained with rain and with Fanchon's own blood. There were letters in it. From Mrs. Carstairs. Long letters, written in a vital, nervous sort of hand. There was money. There was the photograph of Evelyn's parents; there were snapshots of Fanchon thought the place in which Evelyn must have last lived and called home. There were also snapshots of the school in Honolulu and the one in San Francisco.

It would not be hard. It would be more or less natural that Evelyn would not speak much or often of her mother and father to the people who had cast them out. As far as Hawaii went, Fanchon was on perfectly safe ground there. She studied the letters, the photographs.

Suddenly a thought reached her, stopped her heart for an instant.

Evelyn must have written her aunt. It was beyond conception that her hand and Fanchon's should be alike Fanchon fixed that fact firmly in her mind. She must remember.

She remembered something else, with an effort. Remembered that among the small pieces of luggage Evelyn had brought on the plane had been a little portable typewriter. It was quite within reason that her letters to Mrs. Carstairs had been written on the machine. If so, so much the better.

She thought of the meeting that lay ahead of her. She longed for it, and yet shrank from it. But no great display of affection on her part nor on the part of Mrs. Carstairs would be necessary or even reasonable. For they had never known one another.

Yet Jennie Carstairs' wire had been affectionate in the extreme. Due, thought Fanchon, logically, to the situation, to the tremendous peril in which she knew her niece had been placed. It was natural enough. Natural, too, that she would not ask Evelyn to talk much of the accident.

Half a dozen times before she reached New York, Fanchon was seized with a frantic desire, born of sheer, blind panic, to get out at the first best station, to run away, to hide, to find a ship that sailed for far countries and alien seas, to run away from the old life of Fanchon Meredith, the hunted life of "Miss Smith," the self chosen, stolen life of Evelyn Howard, who was going toward safety, toward people who cared, toward freedom.

Once she rose and took down the borrowed hat from the rack. Once she picked up the straw suit case the farmer's wife had loaned her, with a few bare necessities in it; once she walked, suitcase in hand, to the door of the drawing room and laid her hand upon the knob. But returned at once to her seat

Cash Settles Their "Affair"

Herbert Spivak (left), dapper young chauffeur, and Gladys Belden, wealthy heiress of Jamaica, L. I., who brought suit in New York to recover $240,000 worth of real estate which she deeded to the former. Spivak denied that there was any understanding of a marriage between them in return for the property—and stated his intention of keeping the real estate. It was said that her father, Dr. Charles K. Belden, had offered to make a financial settlement with the chauffeur, which the latter found acceptable.

by the window and her bewildered, frantic thinking. She could not go back. She must go on. Her mind felt hurt and bruised with the effort at thought, her bandaged arm ached, her wrenched muscles cried out.

"You have a very bad shock and shaking up," Doctor Warren had said, "and I wish you would stay on with Mrs. Lawson for a few days. But, if you won't, you won't. Only my orders—professional orders, are—that when you reach your destination, you permit yourself to be put to bed and you stay there. . . ."

She had promised. At the first big city they reached, reporters boarded the train and invaded her drawing room. Eager, shock-haired boys, one lean, sallow

Answers to Pertinent Questions Asked By Salem Voters

Electors of Salem have asked me, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, several pertinent questions since the primary. Their inquiries concern three major issues—Taxation, Public Works as a Measure of Unemployment Relief, and Law Enforcement.

Every man and woman who goes to the polls in Salem next Tuesday is entitled to know a candidate's stand on these issues. In this open letter, I have briefly expressed my convictions about the public policies which should govern conduct of the mayor's office for the next two years, policies which I shall follow to the letter, if elected.

TAXATION—Salem faces a critical situation in taxation. Loss of several large industries and declining property values have cut deeply into our duplicate. Limitation on levies, imposed by state law, prevents the city from raising additional revenue by increasing tax rates. Delinquent taxes have still further reduced our city's income. This is no time for extravagant expenditures for improvements, which may be much needed and justifiable in normal times. We should maintain our public improvements in servicable condition and stop there, until business conditions improve.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF—Jobs rather than charity is the plea of Salem's unemployed. I should recommend for the coming winter that all city work that can be performed by unskilled labor be reserved for those men with families who must have aid, that the work be rotated without discrimination as to race, color or creed to those whose need is most pressing. I should recommend that all contracts for city work contain a provision that Salem labor shall be used wherever possible and that materials shall be supplied by Salem business firms unless it can be shown to be to the taxpayers' best interests to purchase elsewhere.

LAW ENFORCEMENT—Impartiality in administration of Salem ordinances is a principle of law enforcement in which all right-thinking citizens must concur. There is only one way to prove the reasonableness of an ordinance—to enforce it to the letter as it applies to every citizen. If after such impartial trial an ordinance fails to contribute to the best interests of the community, it should be amended or repealed. The mayor is bound by his oath to enforce each and every law of the city without fear or favor. In conducting the mayor's court, I should be governed by this principle—Special privilege for none, justice for all.

But she argued that, in a sense, she was doing no real harm. Jennie Carstairs had never known Evelyn Howard. She could, therefore, never have loved her. The girl was literally nothing to her, save some one of her blood to whom she owed a belated duty. If Fanchon took her place, Fanchon would, she vowed, live up to it; she would give back value received, for affection and peace she would render affection and duty in return. And when time had passed and there was no longer any danger, she would go quietly away and never bother anyone again. It was not on the cards that Evelyn would live.

She thought of Evelyn dying, with no one of her own about her,

and her heart constricted with an agony of shame and terror and self loathing. But she had spoken; or rather she had kept silent. It was too late . . . too late.

Evelyn would die without recovering consciousness. Jennie Carstairs would be spared much unhappiness and self reproach; and she, Fanchon, would find, for a little time, at least, a measure of safety and peace.

She opened Evelyn's big, flat, roomy handbag, stained with rain and with Fanchon's own blood. There were letters in it. From Mrs. Carstairs. Long letters, written in a vital, nervous sort of hand. There was money. There was the photograph of Evelyn's parents; there were snapshots of Fanchon thought the place in which Evelyn must have last lived and called home. There were also snapshots of the school in Honolulu and the one in San Francisco.

It would not be hard. It would be more or less natural that Evelyn would not speak much or often of her mother and father to the people who had sent them out. As far as Hawaii went, Fanchon was on perfectly safe ground there. She studied the letters, the photographs.

Suddenly a thought reached her, stopped her heart for an instant.

Evelyn must have written her aunt. It was beyond conception that her hand and Fanchon's should be alike Fanchon fixed that fact firmly in her mind. She must remember.

She remembered something else, with an effort. Remembered that among the small pieces of luggage Evelyn had brought on the plane had been a little portable typewriter. It was quite within reason that her letters to Mrs. Carstairs had been written on the machine. If so, so much the better.

She thought of the meeting that lay ahead of her. She longed for it, and yet shrank from it. But no great display of affection on her part nor on the part of Mrs. Carstairs would be necessary or even reasonable. For they had never known one another.

Yet Jennie Carstairs' wire had been affectionate in the extreme. Due, thought Fanchon, logically, to the situation, to the tremendous peril in which she knew her niece had been placed. It was natural enough. Natural, too, that she would not ask Evelyn to talk much of the accident.

Half a dozen times before she reached New York, Fanchon was seized with a frantic desire, born of sheer, blind panic, to get out at the first best station, to run away, to hide, to find a ship that sailed for far countries and alien seas, to run away from the old life of Fanchon Meredith, the hunted life of "Miss Smith," the self chosen, stolen life of Evelyn Howard, who was going toward safety, toward people who cared, toward freedom.

Once she rose and took down the borrowed hat from the rack. Once she picked up the straw suit case the farmer's wife had loaned her, with a few bare necessities in it; once she walked, suitcase in hand, to the door of the drawing room and laid her hand upon the knob. But returned at once to her seat

Cash Settles Their "Affair"

Herbert Spivak (left), dapper young chauffeur, and Gladys Belden, wealthy heiress of Jamaica, L. I., who brought suit in New York to recover $240,000 worth of real estate which she deeded to the former. Spivak denied that there was any understanding of a marriage between them in return for the property—and stated his intention of keeping the real estate. It was said that her father, Dr. Charles K. Belden, had offered to make a financial settlement with the chauffeur, which the latter found acceptable.

by the window and her bewildered, frantic thinking. She could not go back. She must go on. Her mind felt hurt and bruised with the effort at thought, her bandaged arm ached, her wrenched muscles cried out.

"You have a very bad shock and shaking up," Doctor Warren had said, "and I wish you would stay on with Mrs. Lawson for a few days. But, if you won't, you won't. Only my orders—professional orders, are—that when you reach your destination, you permit yourself to be put to bed and you stay there. . . ."

She had promised. At the first big city they reached, reporters boarded the train and invaded her drawing room. Eager, shock-haired boys, one lean, sallow man and a couple of pretty "sob sisters." They apologized for their intrusion but told her that in the interest of the news and public they must have her first hand story of the accident.

She knew that it was safer not to antagonize them. They perched on the seats, on the arms of things, even squatted on the floor, listening avidly. The train stopped over there for half an hour. During that time Fanchon told them what she recalled of the accident itself. . . . of the first part of the flight. Eames, one of the reporters said, had been an important man in his town. This was being played up in the press. The pilot, too, McKinon, for he had had a war record and had also been pilot on a successful flight from England to Australia. He also was news, said the reporters, not callous, not unkind, simply seeking to feed their master, the insatiable press.

And Fanchon herself was news. By now they all knew that Evelyn Howard was a niece of Mrs. Carstairs—the Mrs. Carstairs. That was news. And news, too, the wire that reached her at the same station at which the reporters got on.

"Waiting anxiously. Collin would have come out and brought you the rest of the way, but he is in Canada and cannot be reached in time," wired "Aunt Jennie."

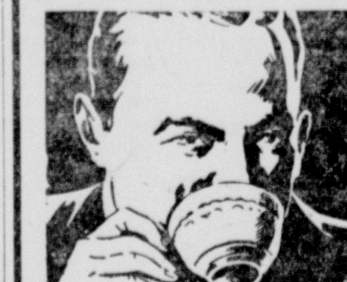

Collin? thought Fanchon. But during their rapid fire conversation, the reporters enlightened her. Collin was Mrs. Carstairs' only son. A big game hunter. A polo player. An eligible bachelor. One of the most eligible. He was in the North Woods at present, she learned, simply by listening when one of the reporters asked her: "We understand that Mr. Collin Carstairs is up North?" and by nodding intelligently.
